

I'm not a bot

Looking to get some balljoints and a hub assembly for my truck ('07 Chevy Colorado), and I saw good prices for decent parts on Detroit Axle's website. I got some brake rotors from them about a year ago for my truck and they've held up great so far. What do people more experienced than me think, or are there some other brands that people would prefer for OEM quality replacement? Posts or comments of this type will result in a ban. If you are constantly being a troll we will ban you (we take post and comment history into account). Harassment is a bit more nuanced, as there is a great difference between calling someone a child compared to something you wouldn't say in front of your parents. Also anything getting personal or continued picking on a particular member will result in a ban. This goes for both Red Wings and other teams' players. Comments like this will be removed on sight and depending on the severity you could be banned. Titles must be descriptive of your post. Your title should try to match the article's headline or provide enough context to understand your submission without needing to open the thread. Vague titles will be removed and asked to be re-submitted. For example: This would be removed: "Dylan Larkin" This would be allowed: "Thoughts on Dylan Larkin's recent offensive contributions?" After an increase of scam posts across Reddit were now including ticket sales in this rule. We are not able to verify ticket sales and do not want to be a platform that can lead to scammers. Reddit requires a 10:1 ratio when posting your own content and r/DetroitRedWings follows the same guidelines. This means that 10% or less of your posts and comments on this subreddit should be your own content. Failure to do so will result in your account being banned and your website being added to the domain blacklist. Podcasts: Episodes can only be posted once every 7 days. Personal blogs: blog posts can only be posted once every 14 days. Above all, posts in r/DetroitRedWings should be related to the Detroit Red Wings in some obvious way. Traveling to other teams' subreddits to harass or antagonize their fans is an automatic ban. This one speaks for itself. We recognize there is a lot going on in the world. But this subreddit is not the best place to talk about it. This would be an approved comment in the daily discussion thread, for example: Why didn't Russia have a team in the four nations tournament? Comments or posts linking to archived versions of paywalled content will be removed. Same for posts/comments that directly link to illegal/pirated streams.
